Abstract

Multifunctional materials have garnered significant attention in the modern electronics as of their diverse properties and wide range of applications. In this study, we synthesized materials that possess dual functionality, enabling them to perform multiple tasks in a single study. Hence, we synthesized TiO₂/Ag₂VO₄ at different weight percentages of Ag₂VO₄ in Ag₂VO₄ incorporated TiO₂ hybrid composite material, by a facile hydrothermal approach crystalline phase of TiO₂ and the cubic phase of Ag₂VO₄ was confirmed by powder x-ray diffraction. The band gap of pristine TiO₂ (3.19 eV) was markedly decreased to 2.81 eV for the 20% Ag₂VO₄ incorporated TiO₂ composite. Scanning electron microscopy (SEM) results for the composite demonstrate that the morphology changes the shape and prevents the aggregation of TiO₂ nanoparticles. The structural nature of hybrid composites were analyzed using energy dispersive x-ray analysis (EDX). Our analysis showed that the weight percentage of the TiO₂ thin film was improved by Ag₂VO₄ conductivity and carrier concentration were achieved with 20% Ag₂VO₄ incorporated TiO₂ and 1.40 × 10²² cm⁻³, respectively. For solar energy conversion applications, the efficiency in dye-sensitized solar cells (DSSCs) was investigated. Interestingly, 20% Ag₂VO₄ incorporated TiO₂ composite efficiency of 5.76% relative to pristine TiO₂ and other hybrid samples. The TiO₂/Ag₂VO₄ hybrid material in terms of photo structure and photoconductivity effect between the two components, which leads to enhanced light harvesting properties, may be guide the design of materials for photoconductive and photoconductive, with broad and photoconductive structures. These findings will be useful for future research.

- Dr.Ravikumar, Associate Professor, ECE Department published a journal paper titled "Transmitting patient's health care information using LEDs in hospitals through VLC technology " in SCI Journal (Journal of Optics) as well as Anna University Annexure I list.
- Dr.K.G.Revathi Dean (Student Affairs) has published a paper entitled "Enhancing the photocatalytic Activity of a TiO₂/Ag₂VO₄ Hybrid Composite for optoelectronic and Solar Energy Conversion" in Journal of Electronics Materials, (SCI & Annexure 1 list).
